Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Before Independence, England was the destination for an Indian doctor who wanted to study medicine beyond MBBS degree. England was treating India as a part of United Kingdom. Most of the privileges that the citizens of England enjoyed were also conferred on the Indians. For a doctor graduated from an Indian university, it was easy to get a job as a houseman in a hospital in the United Kingdom. Dinker s medical degree belonged to the 21st century. Dinker got it approximately 5 decades after India became independent. Soon after Independence, medical education in India was reformed and redesigned to discourage Indian doctors from going for higher studies to England. By January 1950 when India became a Republic the dominion status of India was repealed and the government of the United Kingdom began to treat the Indian medical graduates as foreign medical graduates equal to those from any other country. Very few Indian medical graduates were admitted to England as immigrants and just a few more were admitted as students. Dinker never aspired to go to England for...
