The decrease at first is not uniform, as would be the case if the substance had given up all its excess of heat to the calorimeter immediately after reading off the maximum temperature. It is assumed that the principal period continues through ten minutes--i. e. , after ten minutes the decrease of temperature from minute to minute is uniform. Then t_0 is the temperature at the beginning of the investigation, and t_1, t_2, \dots, t_n the temperatures observed from minute to minute during the principal period. 3. The After-period. --Finally, $t_0, t_1, t_2, \dots, t_n$ are the temperatures observed from minute to minute during the after-period--i. e. , the period in which the temperature change, due to radiation, has become uniform. Let the temperature changes during the fore-, principal, and after-periods be represented by A and A_f, A_r , then the mean temperature changes of the fore- and after-periods correspond to the mean temperatures t_5 and t_s of the two periods; that is, --Other corrections, Berthelot, Mec. chim. I, p. 208, 1879; Wiedemann and Ebert, *Phys.
